

Argyle
A Culture of Conservation

At Argyle, we are growers first. We are also an Oregon winery with deep roots in our community, and a commitment to the long-term health of our land and the Oregon wine industry. This means that we believe in being good stewards of our vineyards, good neighbors, and a positive force in our communities. To achieve this, we are dedicated to the tenets of sustainability in all areas of our operations, including water conservation, energy efficiency, composting, waste reduction, renewable packaging, civic responsibility, philanthropy, social equity, and much more. We believe that rigorous third-party certification is the most authentic and transparent way to share our sustainability story with our customers. In 2008, when the LIVE (Low Input Viticulture & Enology) certification program was invented, Argyle became one of the very first wineries to earn certification. LIVE certification also encompasses Salmon Safe certification. While we take pride in what we have accomplished so far, we are constantly striving to be better environmental citizens, while producing wines that reflect the intersection between people and place that have been at the core of our philosophy since 1987.
